The $253 dinner tab

Hard to believe but a man in his 20s, known only as "Rainbow," devoured an estimated 35 pounds of food at a Carmel restaurant last week. The bill came to $253 and he reportedly left still hungry. Details about the five-hour eat-in are on page two.

Big crowd for growth conclave

More people than expected came to a public workshop Tuesday to debate whether the Carmel area can absorb a 47 per cent increase in population. The sobering prediction could come true by 1998, a consultant has said. What it means for the Carmel Sanitary District and for local residents is explored starting on page three.

Superintendent's big pay cut

Harris Taylor, outgoing superintendent of Carmel Unified School District, wants to teach until he retires at 60. Involved is a $16,000 pay cut, a return to the classroom and a way to boost his retirement income. The story is on page 17.

Bishop who fled from Amin

Is it a bar or restaurant?

The Fabulous Toots Lagoon has pushed its luck, according to city officials. Licensed as a restaurant, it now is accused of violating terms of the license by selling cocktails over the bar. The city required the owners to erect a plastic guard along the bar so patrons can buy liquor only from a waitress. An in-depth story about the issue starts on page three.

Hidden Valley Music Seminars raises $100,000

'Do or die' fund drive works

By AL EISNER

HIDDEN VALLEY Music Seminars is on the brink of achieving its goal of raising $100,000 and will continue in operation at its Carmel Valley location.

The Hidden Valley board of trustees agreed two months ago to a "do or die" effort to raise the sum to meet operating costs for the coming year and to clear up $30,000 in outstanding debts.

Hidden Valley dean Peter Meckel said Monday that the trustees and another group, Friends of Hidden Valley, had pledged totaling $91,000 from some 90 individuals and organizations, and that the remaining $9,000 seemed certain to come in during the current fund-raising effort.

Hidden Valley, an educational institution that offers musical, dance and opera performances, is now in its 15th year.

The massive fund drive made it possible, Meckel said, to start making immediate plans for the Opera Ensemble's fourth season, to start Dec. 31. The season will open with a new production of Puccini's Madame Butterfly. A Donizetti comedy, Elisir of Love, will be staged in March, and Verdi's Rigoletto will be produced in May.

"This represents a profound change in our financial policy," Meckel said. "We determined the financial need at the beginning of the year. Now that the need has been met, the staff can devote its full energies to the program, instead of spending a disproportionate amount of time raising funds," he added.

Plagued by financial woes since its inception in 1962, the Hidden Valley organization has continued to present high-quality symphony and choral concerts, operas and theatrical offerings. There were numerous occasions when productions already underway were threatened with closing because of items like overdue utility bills. The institution was often rescued by "angels" when extinction seemed all but inevitable.

LAST YEAR, the Opera Ensemble presented La Boheme, Transformations, The Barber of Seville and The Magic Flute. All the productions were praised lavishly by music critics, including Opera News, which said: "... the company has reached a level of musical excellence and sheer theatrical engrossment that demands the attention of all Bay Area opera-goers."

Since funds were short, the program was threatened with curtailment on several occasions. Several stars of London's famed Royal Ballet gave benefit performances here to raise badly needed funds. Other well-known figures in the world of music and entertainment gave time and sometimes money to keep the program alive.

Canada compliment

Dear Editor:

For some six years now, my husband and I have spent our every second year vacation in Carmel and San Francisco. We are completely enchanted with the area, in particular Carmel. In our opinion, it is one of the most beautiful and unique places to be found anywhere.

We have explored Carmel and surrounding areas in our limited one-week stays there and I am sure we have yet to uncover all the scenic delights it and the Monterey Peninsula hold for us on future trips.

My main purpose in writing, besides telling you how much we enjoy Carmel, is to comment on one fact that struck our party of four at the end of our vacation there recently.

We enjoyed many memorable meals on our trip and agreed that we were superbly served and very well treated in every restaurant of our choice — June Simpson's, Mission Ranch, La Playa, to mention only a few. We felt the standout, for delicious dinners, served by the gracious and competent staff of Lore Parsons, was the Sundial Kitchen.

We felt that a compliment should be extended for such a superb effort.

A debt to Bing

Dear Editor:

The article in the Herald about Bing Crosby is to be commended. Yes, Monterey Peninsulans have truly lost a dear friend. We are indebted beyond words for Bing's generosity to our community.

Now it is our turn to show our love and appreciation to this fine gentleman and his family. What better way could we pay tribute to Bing's memory than to start a building fund for a chapel for all faiths to be located in our Community Hospital building or grounds.

Our hospital setting would be difficult to duplicate anywhere in the world. The beauty of the building, the magnificent trees, the highly sophisticated equipment, the excellent medical staff and the outstanding volunteer auxiliary. We have everything and yet we lack a quiet sanctuary to find refuge in our thoughts and prayers when a loved one is ill.

The "Bing Crosby" chapel would make our hospital complete. The patients, their families, visitors, nurses, doctors and employees alike would benefit beyond measure.

Perhaps, the time wasn't right until now — Bing gave the world much comfort and joy in his lifetime.

To start the project on the way, we need editorials in the local publications along with the endorsement of the hospital board and auxiliary members, local radio and television stations. Once Monterey Peninsulans are called upon for their support, the Bing Crosby memorial chapel will become a reality.

Praise for candidate

Dear Editor:

In the coming election, there is to be elected two members to the Carmel Sanitary District Board. At this time, there is an outstanding candidate offering himself as a new member of that board.

His career has provided him with wide and valued experience and with expertise in management. He has been in charge of important projects, often coping with and solving problems in finance, personnel and construction engineering.

He is a "good sense" candidate and well qualified for this job in the Carmel area. He has resided here for over seven years and has many friends who remember his active assistance in the "Olaf" project, which saved the artichoke lands west of Highway 1.

He is Vernon A. Head. I intend to vote for Col. Head on Nov. 8 and urge that you consider him as your candidate as well.

In defense of dogs

Dear Editor:

Please tell the lady who thinks dogs are dirty ("Of smog and dogs," Letters, Oct. 20) that we are a well-bred, well-behaved lot in Carmel.

My mistress walks the beach every day and has never stepped on anything unpleasant.

I have never seen a dog throw broken bottles and tin cans on the beach for children to step on. By the way, the children like to play with us, and we like it too when they are well trained.

Music seminars born at forest camp

HIDDEN VALLEY Music Seminars was born in the Angeles National Forest above Pasadena in 1962. The first year's program of study was a summer camp seminar for college-age instrumentalists on a site used for church retreats. Intensive individual and group music study for the carefully selected students was capped by orchestra ensemble concerts.

John Waddell came to Hidden Valley in 1964 as director of its choral program.

Michael Zearott, a conductor for the Monte Carlo Symphony, joined Hidden Valley in 1967 when Dean Peter Meckel moved the seminars to the campus of Robert Louis Stevenson School in Pebble Beach. Concerts were given at Erdman Chapel at RLS and also at All Saints' Church in Carmel.

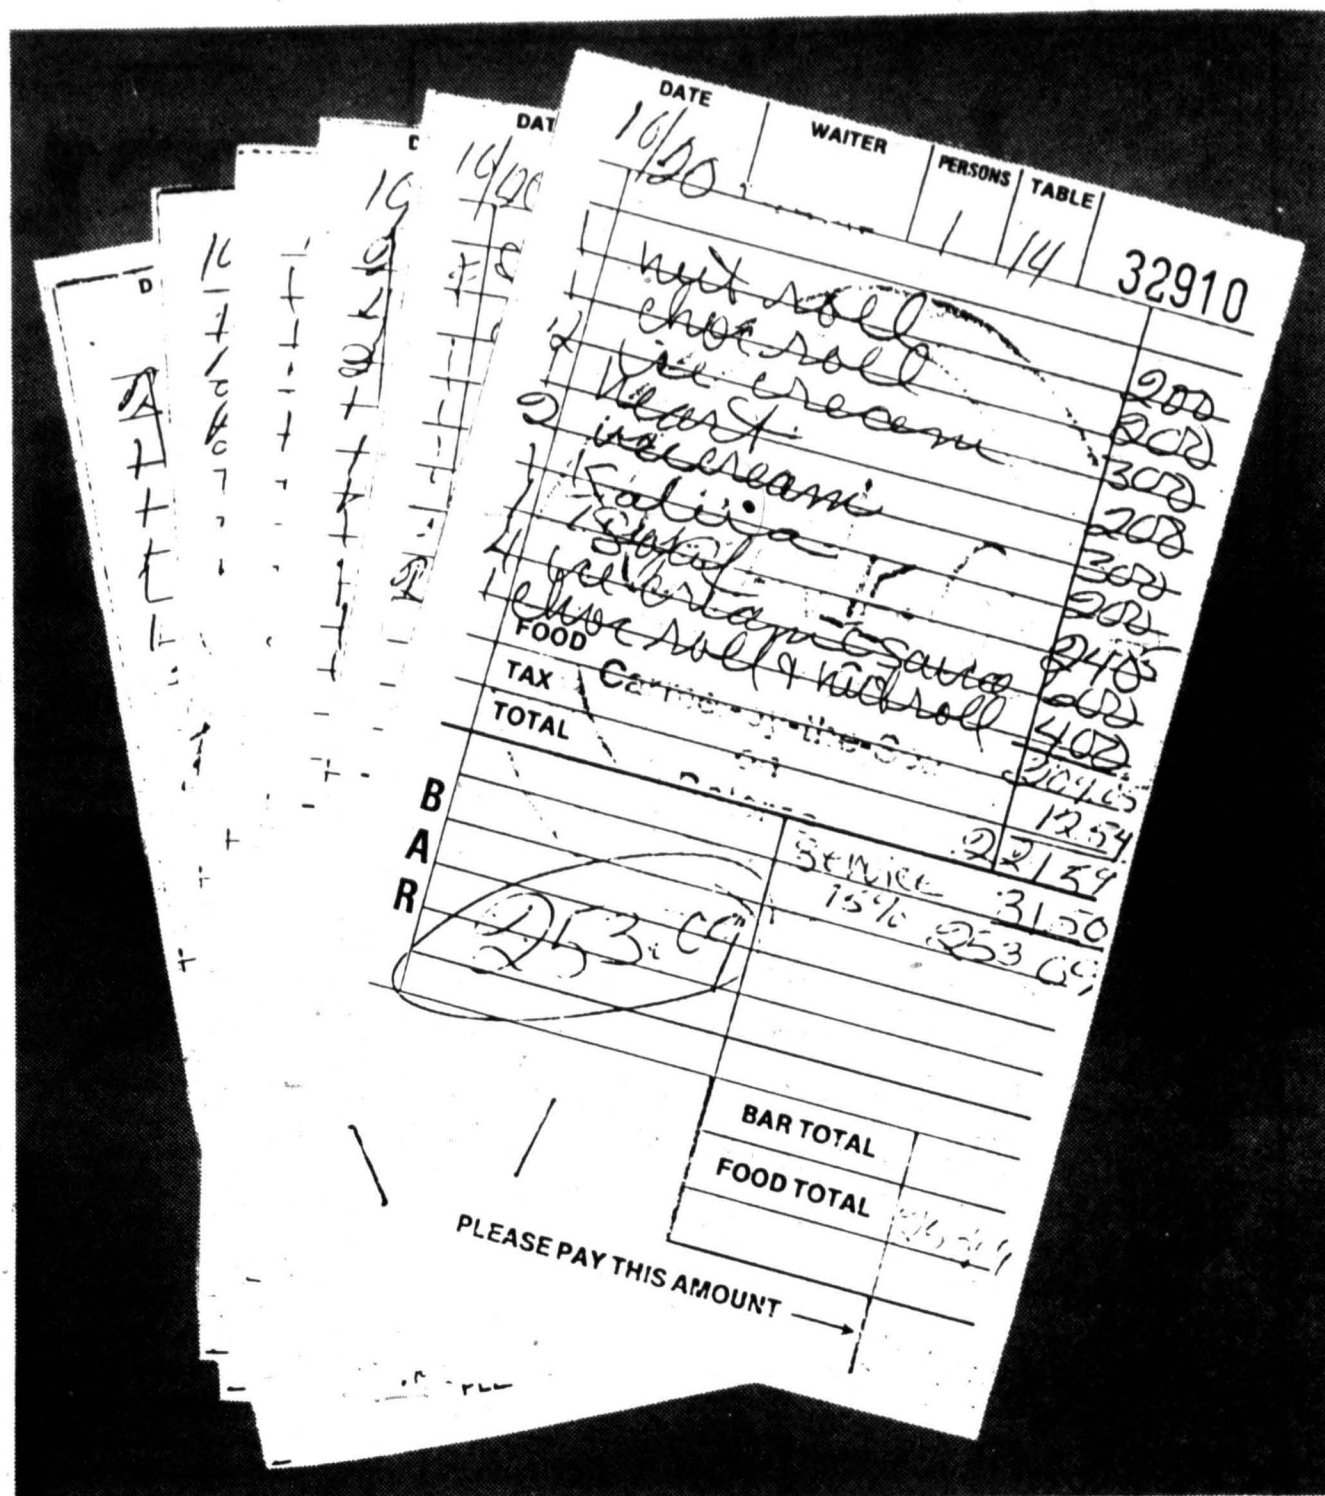

The seminars later operated at the York School on Highway 68 for three years before moving to the present campus in Carmel Valley Village. The group used the existing theater building formerly used by the White Oaks Theater group and added the dormitories.

THE FOLLOWING YEAR, 1973, marked the organization's first concerts at Carmel's Sunset Auditorium. A year earlier, Hidden Valley mounted a season of musical theater offerings, including Camelot, Fiddler on the Roof and Pirates of Penzance, under the direction of Michael Keller. Hidden Valley also spawned the Magic Carpet Theater

Henry Holt is new music advisor

Meckel, the Hidden Valley dean, announced Monday that Henry Holt, artistic director of the Seattle Opera and a trustee of the National Opera Institute, has accepted the position of musical advisor of the Hidden Valley Opera Ensemble. Holt first became acquainted with the Hidden Valley program when he saw a performance of Black River last year.

Lincoln Clark, principal director of the Seattle Opera, will stage the Hidden Valley production of Madame Butterfly, scheduled to open New Year's Eve. Clark directs the Seattle company's annual production of Richard Wagner's Ring.

SLIPPING INTO a fashionable Carmel restaurant, the slender man in his 20s remarked, "You're probably not going to believe how much I'm going to eat."

Five hours later, jumping jimmies, he was still lingering on desserts having already devoured an estimated 35 pounds of foodstuffs.

Charlie O's restaurant served him the food and finally a bill for $253.09. "It was like a Fellini movie," said the waitress, who asked not to be named.

Known as "Rainbow," the hungry man reportedly is an heir to a toy-making fortune, according to Charles Ober, owner of the restaurant. Ober said Rainbow's visit Thursday night was not his first, but it certainly was his longest.

Chefs prepared four different kinds of salad, two variations of fettuccini, a filet mignon, langostino, weinerschnitzel and desserts galore for Rainbow.

His tab was detailed on six checks. He charged it with an American Express Card.

Rainbow had no problem rising from the table at closing time. The waitress attested to that fact, but she said he left a bit disappointed.

He wanted two more chocolate rolls to go, but none were left.

FIREFIGHTERS MOP up after dousing a fire Saturday that caused $50,000 in damage to a Carmel home. Investigators said a painter's dropcloth, tossed over a floor furnace, caught fire and the blaze spread through the wood structure. (Bruce Horovitz photo)

$50,000 damage from fire

Fire swept through a vacant redwood frame house in Carmel Saturday and caused an estimated $50,000 in damage. No one was injured.

The house furnace apparently kicked on early in the morning and ignited a dropcloth spread over its floor duct. The house, situated near Crespi and Flanders, had been painted inside on Friday.

Eight fire units and 26 firefighters responded to the fire, reported at 7:44 a.m. by a neighbor, Anne Collier. The three-room house is owned by George Walker, of Carmel, who was out of town.

"I smelled smoke and checked our fireplace. The smell got very strong. I looked out the window and next door the whole inside of the house was lit up," Mrs. Collier said at the scene. She used the 911 emergency telephone line to summon help.

Firemen doused the blaze at 8:10 a.m., 25 minutes after the first engine arrived.

"As far as we can tell, a portion of a painter's dropcloth was lying over the floor furnace and it may have ignited when the temperature outside dropped and the furnace kicked on," said Carmel Fire Marshal Vern Allred.

He said the board-and-batten house was a rental property and it had been painted inside the day before. The previous tenants reportedly moved out about two weeks ago.

Allred said there was a one-gallon can of latex paint found inside, but he doubted it would have exploded had flames reached it.

Floor furnace ban gains momentum

Statistics show one in four Carmel fires linked to floor furnaces

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

REMOVE TO BAN floor furnaces in new Carmel buildings may gain new momentum following the fire that gutted a Carmel home Saturday.

The fire and building code ordinance, up for its second reading before the Carmel City Council on Nov. 7, would not only prohibit the installation of floor furnaces in new buildings, but it would also ban thermostat controls on existing floor furnaces.

Existing buildings with floor furnaces would not be affected by the ordinance.

Robert Updike, chief of the Carmel Fire Department, said the fire Saturday was linked to a floor furnace.

The problem is not malfunctions in the floor furnaces, he said. "People set things on them," explained the chief. "Hot furnaces can set the items aflame."

A fire department summary of fire causes, submitted earlier this month, indicated some 13 per cent of Carmel fires were related to floor furnaces.

Losses in the fires topped $84,000, the report said. The summary also indicated 23 per cent of Carmel fires in 1976 were caused by floor furnaces.

SATURDAY MORNING'S FIRE was the second floor-furnace-related blaze this year, according to Updike. The other fire, in January, was caused by a pillow's falling onto a floor furnace. The January fire caused no damage, but the weekend blaze destroyed an estimated $50,000 worth of property.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT had requested the City Council bar future repair or replacement of existing floor

The ban would become effective on Dec. 7 furnaces. The department wanted malfunctioning furnaces to be replaced with different heaters.

But at the council's first October meeting, Planning Commissioner Dr. Donald Davidson argued that the elderly would suffer economic hardships under such an ordinance.

"There are people on fixed incomes living in homes heated by floor furnaces," Davidson said. Instead of paying $15 to get one repaired, they could face a $400 bill for a new system, Davidson explained.

Updike explained one floor-furnace hazard involves renters unfamiliar with the proper operation of the unit.

"This will be a very difficult ordinance to enforce," remarked City Administrator Jack Collins.

If the floor-furnace ordinance passes, it will become law on Dec. 7.

Restaurant on carpet for cocktail lounge

You are trying to re-educate people, who for hundreds of years have going up to a bar and asking for a drink.

— Michael Tancredi, owner of the Fabulous Toots Lagoon, to the Carmel Planning Commission in May 1977

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

ABOUT THREE WEEKS ago, the Carmel City Council took 10 minutes to adopt a deceptively simple ordinance. It spelled out the definition of a "non-public service bar." It was defined as a bar where customers can order cocktails only from a waitress.

There was little discussion. The ordinance passed without dissent.

Councilman Bernard Anderson took a minute to explain his view of it. "The purpose is to remove the saloon atmosphere of a restaurant," he said.

Anderson was accurate. The council was acting to remove a "saloon atmosphere," but it was also acting to remove that atmosphere from one restaurant in particular, the Fabulous Toots Lagoon.

The restaurant opened April 22 to a houseful of festive celebrants. The back room had more patrons standing than sitting. It was the kind of grand opening owners dream about.

But it hasn't been all sweet dreams for proprietor Michael Tancredi. He has tossed and turned plenty since August 30, 1976, when Henry R. Marks requested a use permit to transform the former Golden West Pancake Restaurant into a new liquor-serving operation.

TODAY THE FORMER pancake restaurant is the Fabulous Toots Lagoon. The six-month-old operation remains open despite attempts by planning commissioners and councilmen to block issuance of a use permit and further attempts to revoke the permit.

The squabble stems from a single question: Is the back room a restaurant or a bar?

The use permit specifies: Food service operation. The City Code specifies: A food service operation shall have liquor sales subordinate to food sales. If the food sales figure falls below 51 per cent of total sales, the establishment could face suspension or revocation of its permit.

Attorney Dennis Law, representing Toots Lagoon, told the Planning Commission, "So far we greatly exceed the 50 per cent rule," at the commission's July meeting. He insisted Toots Lagoon is a restaurant.

"I feel there's something being circumvented here," answered former Planning Commissioner Paul Sletton.

The restaurant vs. bar image has plagued Toots Lagoon. Despite city orders to reword signs, relocate furniture and revamp its service bar (with which Toots Lagoon has complied), the question still remains in the minds of the city fathers and commissioners: Is the restaurant portraying itself as a place to purchase a cocktail or a dinner? It has advertised happy hours and cut-rate cocktails as recently as Oct. 15.

The issue came to light again at last week's Planning Commission meeting. Former Mayor Eugene Hammond sent commissioners copies of a Toots Lagoon classified advertisement.

LAND USE COMMITTEE recommendations under the initial use permit application in September 1976 were stringent. Commissioners Edward Neroda and Thomas Hawley suggested the requested cocktail lounge be deleted and that the operation be restricted to the serving of beer and wine. Furthermore, sale of beer and wine was to be restricted to those purchasing food.

Owners applied for a new use permit in September 1976. This time the application deleted original applicant Henry Marks. The new application was signed by owners Tancredi and Edward Johnson, of Carmel Valley and Carmel respectively.

Tancredi made his first of many appearances before the Board of Adjustments in October 1976. He said his new restaurant should be a "welcome addition" to Carmel.

One month later, the applicants submitted revised drawings to the commission. The new plans indicated a service bar would replace the proposed public bar.

Land Use Committee report recommendations on the resubmittal decreed that alcoholic beverages be sold only at tables and during hours when full food service was available. The report also said the restaurant could operate only a non-public service bar.

The committee recommended issuance of the use permit. Mayor Gunnar Norberg and Councilman Mike Brown quickly reacted with a letter of protest. They called for an end to the "proliferation of liquor-serving establishments" in Carmel.

The letter noted that Carmel already has three bars and 15 restaurants serving liquor.

AN APPEAL of the Board of Adjustments decision came Continued on page 6

Big crowd likes water recycling — not new growth

PUMPING SEWER WATER into Carmel Bay is wasteful because it could be reused to temper effects of the drought, an estimated 120 persons seemed to agree Tuesday.

Antigrowth sentiments were repeated almost as often, however, as citizens debated a consultant's finding that, with resumed normal rainfall, the population in the Carmel area could increase 47 per cent by 1998. The town hall-type meeting was called by the Carmel Sanitary District, which faces two problems in its future operations.

One of them is the soaring volume of sewage a larger population would generate. The other involves state pressure to stop pumping wastewater into Carmel Bay. The State Water Resources Control Board, acting in 1975, designated the bay as an "area of special biological significance." It asked the district to study ways to avoid dumping waste in the bay.

A crowd larger than district officials anticipated squeezed into a 72-seat drama room at Carmel High School to hear reports about ways water can be reclaimed and a brief explanation of the significance of the population prediction.

"To change the projection to avoid the environmental impacts is to create a limit on development in the area," said Walter Rask, representing Sedway-Cooke Urban and Environmental Planners and Designers. The firm issued the population findings on Aug. 1. They embrace Carmel Valley, Carmel, Del Monte Forest and the Carmel Highlands.

"Projections are not definite, though. What are now constraints on growth — water and road capacities — may change during the next 20 years. For instance, an energy shortage could curtail auto travel and a new dam could be built to mitigate the current drought," Rask said.

GROWTH WAS the focus of the workshop because opinions recorded there will be considered when directors of the Carmel Sanitary District revamp the district's Areawide Facilities Plan, which could include expansion of sewage treatment facilities. A second workshop is scheduled in February with the new master plan due for adoption later in 1978. It last was revised in 1973, but requires new work in the wake of the state action.

After the remarks from Rask and others connected with research for the plan, the audience was asked to split into five discussion groups. Moderated by members of the League of Women Voters, the discussions lasted one hour. A stenographer recorded the far-ranging comments.

Of the many topics discussed, agreement seemed most apparent on the issue of reclaiming the sewage presently pumped into Carmel Bay. Close to 1 million gallons a day are pumped into the bay through a 600-foot-long outfall pipeline. It is situated south of the Carmel River and empties into the

Delay on highway funds

Action was delayed Friday on a request from State Assemblyman Henry J. Mello for highway improvement funds, including $2.7 million that would be used along Highway 1 through the Carmel area.

The Watsonville Democrat had submitted a slate of road projects to the State Highway Commission.

Failing to muster a quorum in Sacramento, the commission could take no action on requests from Mello and other state legislators. The meeting has been rescheduled for Thursday, Nov. 3.

Only three of the present five members of the commission appeared at the meeting. There are two unfilled seats on the commission.

Mello said in a letter to the commission that he wanted safety improvements along a 2.7-mile stretch of Highway 1, between Carmel Hill and Carmel River.

He also listed three other state highway improvement projects in other sections of Monterey County.

Sewage debate

zone of "biological significance."

ALL FIVE moderators reported their discussion groups liked the recycling concept. There seemed to be agreement the reclaimed water could be used to water crops and landscaping, but a few speakers warned of possible health threats from reusing sewage.

To the larger question of allowing a 47 per cent increase in population, one woman in the audience said, "If there isn't enough water for people here now, how can we plan if we don't know how much water there will be later?"

Two of the five group moderators reported their groups opposed allowing the projected population increase. A third indicated her group reluctantly said it could accept the 47 per cent figure.

In one case, the moderator said residents in the Carmel Valley and Carmel Highlands do not wish to join the Carmel Sanitary District. She reported speakers from the area said they feared sewers would induce growth. Both areas are served by septic tanks.

THERE WAS OVERWHELMING opposition to a suggestion Carmel area sewage be pumped to Monterey through the Del Monte Forest or over Carmel Hill. The exporting idea was one of 20 listed by Kennedy Engineers, a second consultant on the pending master plan.

A spokesman for the engineering firm, Richard L. Nedell, listed other ways wastewater conceivably could be handled. Among them:

- Continued dumping in the sea, but beyond the state-set "biological significance" zone. The plan would require nearly one added mile of pipe.
- Discharge of treated waste along the Carmel River. He mentioned dump sites near Schulte Road and Laureles Grade. Nedell said river discharge is not feasible unless the effluent were more highly treated.
- So-called "high-rate land applications" at land sites resilient enough to sustain heavy applications of waste. He said the floor of Potrero Canyon was the only conceivable site found so far by experts.
- Injection into the groundwater table also has been considered, but he said county health authorities will not allow it. Nedell said the method might be usable with new technology that could yield purer wastewater.

The sanitary district presently can treat up to 2.4 million gallons a day, said Kevin D. Walsh. He said because of water rationing, the average daily intake at the plant has dropped to the 1-million-gallon level. Water is treated up to a secondary stage, still unfit for human consumption.

Walsh said the highest refined sewage, that from a third-stage plant, is considered safe to drink by some scientists. If Carmel elected to build a third-stage plant, Walsh said 12.5 per cent of its cost would be paid locally. The remainder could be paid by state and federal sources, he said.

HERE IS AN EXTRAORDINARY OPPORTUNITY

To Put Integrity and Competence in Public Office

Vernon L. Head

This is Vernon Head, retired Colonel U.S. Air Force and candidate for the Carmel Sanitary District Board in the November 8, 1977 election.

He has amply demonstrated service to his country over thirty years including three wars, and now offers to serve his community.

Vernon is a graduate of San Jose State University, The Air War College and The Air Staff School.

He has had considerable experience as a pilot; in the training of young officers and aircraft technical groups; in administration, finance and personnel; and in the construction and operation of air bases.

A few years ago he was Executive Director of OLAF. It raised substantial funds towards the purchase of the Carmel River-Route 1 western artichoke fields, thereby helping to make them part of the State Parks system.

Vernon Head is a "good sense" candidate who warrants broad community support. We urge you to give him a chance. We're voting for him for the Carmel Sanitary District Board. It's a small election — your single vote is important.

A bar or a restaurant?

before the City Council in December 1976.

Following a reading of the letter from Brown and Norberg, Norberg spoke on the number of restaurants with bars in a city of fewer than 5,000 people. Brown added he was not appealing the decision for a restaurant, or wine and beer sales, but only the serving of hard liquor.

The hearing was continued to the next meeting. This time Tancredi came armed with support. More than a dozen Carmelites spoke in favor of the applicant. The city clerk read another half-dozen letters in support of the applicant.

Tancredi claimed he was the victim of discrimination. He pointed out that a similar use permit, applied for at the same time and approved by the commission, was not appealed by Norberg and Brown.

His reference was to a use permit granting a restaurant and service bar to applicant Craig McFarland at the McFarland Court on Mission and Sixth Avenue. McFarland later opted for a clothing store, the Jag, in lieu of the proposed restaurant.

Carmel has more than 15 per cent of the county's liquor licenses, but only 2 per cent of the county's population. Commissioner Robert Stephenson reminded the City Council.

FOLLOWING SEVERAL motions and substitute motions by councilmen, City Attorney George Brehmer told the City Council that the only way to prohibit permits for liquor-serving establishments would be to pass a moratorium.

The council adopted such a moratorium that began on Dec. 15. The four-month moratorium was extended to a full year and is scheduled to end in less than two months.

The restaurant opened in April with decor of the 1925 Carmel era. By May, the Board of Adjustments had already accused the applicants of breaking terms of the use permit.

The allegation was that patrons were buying their own drinks at the bar.

"It is difficult," Tancredi explained, "to turn down a person at the service bar from ordering a drink from a bartender."

THE LOCATION of the service bar was contrary to the original plans approved by the commission. Tancredi explained the Fire and Building departments recommended removal of the bar at its approved location because it blocked a fire corridor.

While the commission bickered about the interior, Building Inspector Fred Cuninghame became angry and said, "Until now, you have never had anything to say about the interior of a building. If these are your future plans — let me know."

The place looks like a bar, complained Commissioner Robert Stephenson, regarding the restaurant back room. He cited 42-inch-high tables as bar-like tables and said stools are Install a money trap in your attic.

INSULATING CAN SAVE OVER $50 A YEAR IN HEATING COSTS.

Heat rises. That's why the attic is where most heat-loss happens. The cost of heat keeps rising, too. That's why, more than ever, it pays to insulate. Insulating an attic can save the average homeowner at least $50 a year in heating costs. That means insulation will not only pay for itself, but will save money...and energy...too.

PG&E will make insulating your home easier by arranging free estimates from two qualified contractors. If you request it, we'll inspect the work when it's done. And we'll give you a certificate of installation to R-19 standards.

So if you want help in contractor referrals, or more information, call PG&E's Energy Conservation Center, toll free, at 800-792-8000, Monday through Friday, 8 AM to 8 PM. (If your telephone area code is 805, call collect to 415-543-2073.) Or fill out and mail the coupon or return it with your bill payment.

Do it now, before winter sets in. So you can feel warm all over about the money you'll save.

Police find restaurant empty, but the bar was busy often pulled up to the bar. "Someone's trying to pull the wool over our eyes," he warned.

Law, the restaurant attorney, asked, "What harm is caused by a person occasionally walking up to a bar and asking for a drink?"

The commission reminded Law that Toots Lagoon had no such permit. They also warned him that hostesses at the restaurant's entrance had developed the habit of inquiring if customers want to sit in the back room or the restaurant.

The matter of back-room customer seating was partially cleared up in June when Law said his client was willing to remove all tables and stools from the back room and replace them with booths.

The commissioners refused and suggested an 18-inch-high glass partition around the bar with one 24-inch opening for dispensing drinks. The commission further directed the owners not to sell drinks from the service bar.

MEANWHILE, THE COMMISSION received a report from a Carmel policeman who said the service bar was still being used by walk-up customers.

Officer Donald Fuselier said he entered Toots Lagoon on June 20 and said the dining room was empty, but 25 to 30 persons were in the cocktail lounge.

"The customers were drinking at the bar and at several small tables. I did not observe anyone eating in the cocktail lounge," Fuselier said.

The issue came to a boil at the commission's August meeting. Angered commissioners considered revoking the establishment's use permit.

"If we have found a clear-cut violation of the use permit, aren't we obligated to revoke it?" asked Commissioner Dr. Donald Davidson.

While applicants and commissioners argued over the restaurant's interior, Commissioner Leslie Gross bellowed, "If they are not satisfied, let's remove the damned bar. The commission has to stand on its own feet," he exclaimed.

After months of explaining to commissioners and councilmen, there was wear in Tancredi's voice as he told the commission, "We've attempted to operate with integrity. I'm not a carpetbagger. That shadow is beginning to wear on me."

Bickering continued until City Attorney George Brehmer interrupted. "It would be one hell of a shame to throw the baby out with the bathwater. Let's work this out and settle the doggone thing today," Brehmer said in unlikely anger.

The use permit wasn't revoked, but the restaurant was ordered to glass in its service bar with one service opening.

More recently, the commission has ruled on other Toots Lagoon design matters, including a restaurant sign and menu box displays in the window.

Fourteen months ago, Toots Lagoon owners applied for a use permit. Today, the proper use of that permit is still under fire by commissioners.

The restaurant proprietors have appeared before the Planning Commission and the City Council more than a dozen times.

But the question still hasn't been settled: Is the Fabulous Toots Lagoon's back room a bar or restaurant?

TANCREDI TRIED TO answer the question once and for all at a Planning Commission meeting. He pulled a business card from his wallet and read it to the commission: "An eating establishment serving distilled spirits."

The commissioners were unimpressed. "A lot of people peek in the window and think we're a furniture store," Tancredi said.

Padres trounce rivals, ready for homecoming

EVERYTHING IS coming up roses for the Carmel High School Padres, and just in time for Saturday's homecoming game.

After four straight defeats, the Padres have bounced back winning their last two games. Last Saturday, they trounced Robert Louis Stevenson School, 44-6.

Autumn seems brighter for the Padre rooters. The brighter spirits were mirrored in faces of the cheerleaders, song girls, the band members and the fans.

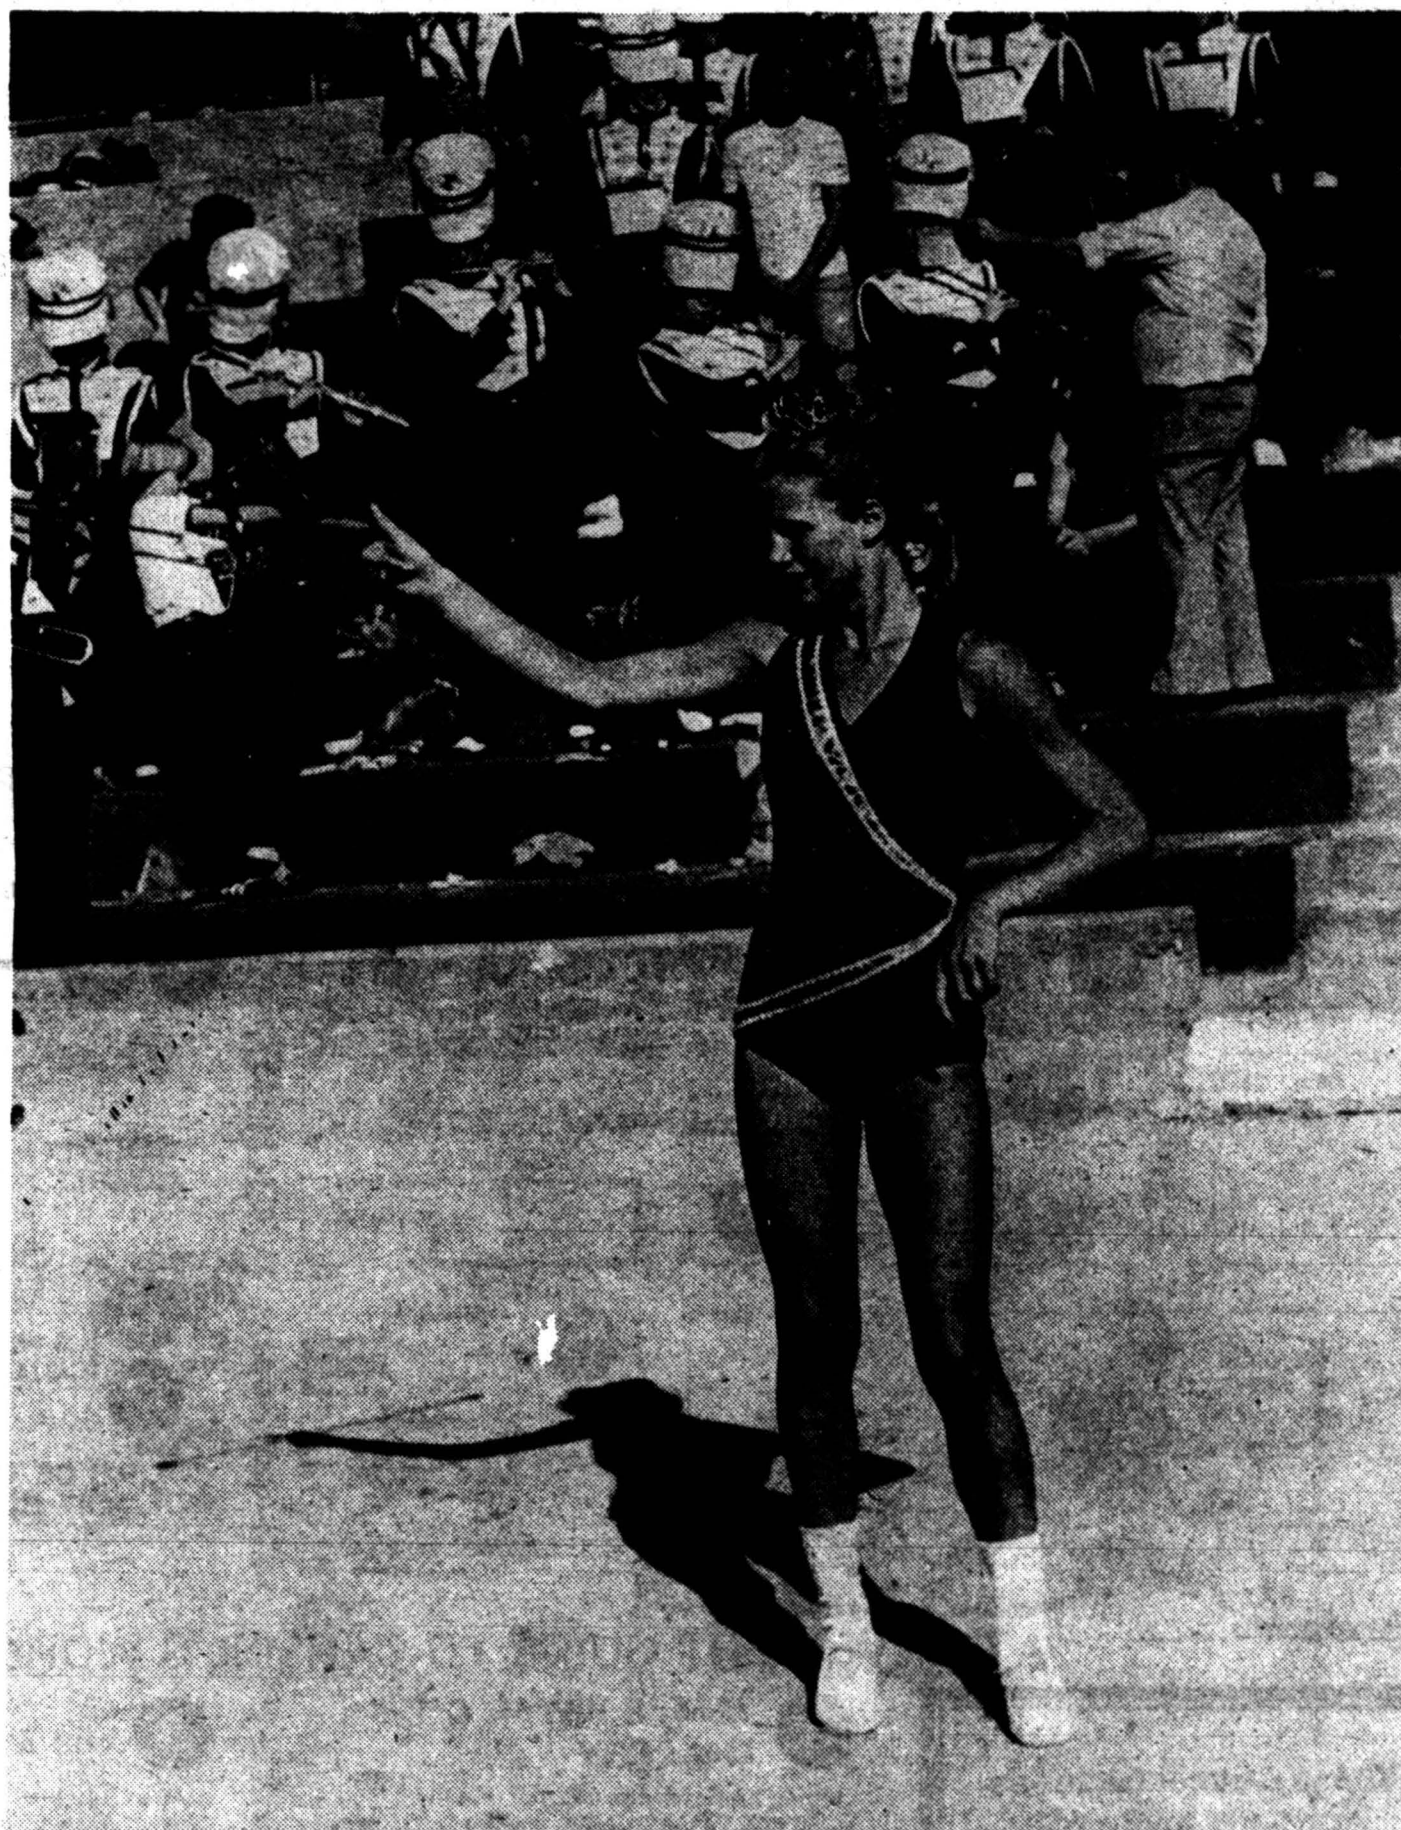

The Padres play host to Gonzales High School, their homecoming rival, on Saturday. Kick-off time is 2 p.m.

Flamenco group performs Friday night

The zesty and dramatic Theatre Flamenco will present one performance at the Monterey Conference Center, Serra Grande Ballroom, 1 Portola Plaza, Monterey, Friday, Oct. 28. The concert begins at 8 p.m.

The touring company of dancers, musicians and singers provides "all the things you could ask for in terms of color, vividness and excitement," according to a review in the San Francisco Chronicle.

Adela Clara, artistic director of the troupe, has studied ballet and modern dance as well as Spanish dance. She formed the Theatre Flamenco Company in 1966 as a "total theater" which offers music, drama and poetry as well as the traditional flamenco dances of Spain.

Miguel Santos, assistant director of the company, studied in Spain with many dance teachers, including La Quica, El Cojo, Victoria Eugenia and Alberto Lorca. He toured with Jose Greco and appeared with him in the film Around the World in 80 Days. "Santos has the stick-straight dash and bravura of all good flamenco dancers," according to the Chronicle.

The concert is presented by Cork 'N' Bottle Productions. Advance tickets, at $6, $8 and $10, are available at all Cork 'N' Bottle liquor stores on the Monterey Peninsula; Abinante Music, 425 Alvarado St., Monterey; Lily Walker Music, 169 Fountain Ave., Pacific Grove; and both Monterey Peninsula Winery locations, at Sixth and Dolores, Carmel, and on Highway 68 east of Monterey.

Admission includes complimentary wine from the wine bar, where

Postcard from the 'wine cruise of the century'

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

VILLEFRANCHE — The "wine cruise of the century," with Alexis Lichine as chief guide and genial host, arrived in this lovely Mediterranean inlet bay between Nice and Monaco. Above were the bright blue skies accountable for the fond name of this locale, the Cote d'Azur. The Promenade des Anglais fronting the yacht-filled harbor of Nice retains still something of its greater elegance of yesterday. Beaulieu-sur-Mer with La Reserve and the Moulin de Mougins of Roger Verge are stellar destinations for the questing gourmet, restaurants of extraordinary tranquility. There is no worry about indifferent service or commonplace food and wine. It is a kind of self-confidence which breeds an aura of general contentment.

FOLLOWING A MEMORABLE luncheon at the Moulin de Mougins, we went into the garden with our dessert — peaches poached in white wine touched with Kirsch, glazed with fresh raspberry puree under dollops of creme fraiche and a crown of spun caramel-sugar. Chef Verge joined us briefly to hear an accounting of our wine journeying in France, Portugal and Spain, but we were more eager to hear about his forthcoming visit to California with Paul Bocuse, with whom he would prepare a dinner for 100 guests at L'Hermitage Restaurant in Los Angeles. "It is the first in a series of dinners we will be doing in your country," he told us. "One a year, in different cities each time."

He disavowed any knowledge of how the lucky 100 would be chosen; word remains that the names will be drawn from a fish-bowl. Friendly professional writers like Craig Claiborne, Gael Greene and Lois Dwan will observe from the kitchen, while predetermined guests like Nancy and Henry Kissinger, Liza Minnelli and Danny Kaye will savor the edibles and potables in the dining room of this Travel/Holiday Award restaurant. It is a hands-across-the-sea gesture of friendship between France and America, in the medium of wine, food and the illuminating talents of two great working chefs.

IN FEBRUARY 1975, master chefs Bocuse, Troisgros and Verge journeyed to California more or less as a lark, on an invitation from Danny Kaye, who promised to teach them his secrets of Chinese cookery, in return for which they'd cook up a dinner on an equally informal basis. By dawn's early light, in the Los Angeles produce market, a menu was composed of the luscious fruits and vegetables they found, their own primary route to excellence at table. They expressed particular delight at the quality of the vegetables and the veal — items certain to be on the menu of the Nov. 28 Los Angeles dinner, along with the celebrated truffle soup Bocuse prepared for the president of France.

And the wines? Bocuse lives in the Beaujolais region of France, and under private label has a number of estate-bottled selections of this good wine of the Gamay grape. But each time he is in California, he samples eagerly the wines his hosts provide from our own good vineyards.

Sipping our 1973 Corton-Charlemagne-Bonneau du Martray at Le Moulin de Mougins with roast squab-pigeon, absorbing simultaneously the harmony engendered by the acceptance of fine food and wine, without chauvinistic rivalry, it seemed an appropriate conclusion for our voyage. As further confirmation of amity among winemakers, we learned that next year's Fiesta de la Vendimia del Sherry in Spain will honor California, a rival wine-producing state, but whose aficionados meet in the appreciation of truly fine wine.

It is good to see such an ideal of quality goals internationally shared. For the consumer, it means ever better wines, and an enlarged focus on the best of all wine countries.

Fascinated by the continually growing interest on a national scale in the Hudson River School, Mr. Robert Jameson Kaller, president of the Galerie de Tours and an authority on American painting of the last century, set out to assemble a major show of these key artists in our history. A year and a half

Dining out:

Alpine Inn is a Carmel charmer

ADVERTISEMENT
Reprinted from The Review

IF YOU'VE come to Carmel expecting to discover quaint, charming little restaurants serving unusual, European cuisine, we have good news. The Alpine Inn, tucked away at the end of the Paseo San Carlos on San Carlos St. between Ocean and Seventh Aves., fits the description perfectly.

It's tiny, with a total seating capacity of barely 20; it's quaintly decorated with traditional Swiss print curtains and cushions; and it serves Swiss/German/European food prepared by a talented young European chef.

Because the Alpine Inn is so small, and because it serves unusual dishes, the dinner menu is limited to three entrees each evening, served as complete dinners for a fixed price. Dinners include cheese fondue, salad, fresh vegetables, bread and butter in addition to the main course. The only other items on the menu are appetizers, beverages and three intriguing desserts. Incidentally, each week's menu repeats through the month, so you can plan a return visit in advance.

A good cheese fondue is served immediately after the menu is presented so you can snack and read simultaneously, and we guarantee you will finish the fondue down to the very last drop.

As might be expected, the Alpine Inn serves a good number of veal entrees, fresh fish, seafood and poultry. The well-rounded menu also offers beef and lamb, frequently prepared en brochette.

We dined on a Thursday, when the menu offered Kassler Rippchen und Sauerkraut, Fresh Snapper in Herb Sauce and Jagerschnitzel. Random samplings from the October menu include Duck Robespierre stuffed with sauteed apples, Swiss style Paprika Schnitzel, Lamb Chops in Mint Gravy, Filet of Sole Meuniere and Scallops in Lobster Sauce.

LORE PARSONS, who presides over the Alpine Inn and who is a native of Germany, deserves special praise for her wonderful Swiss-style dinner salad which is served in an oversized glass goblet. It contains green and black olives, fresh mushrooms, cucumber, tomatoes, red onion rings, artichoke hearts, hard-cooked egg, parsley and dill, all lightly tossed in a mild, flavorful dressing.

Translations of the Thursday entrees gave us smoked roast pork with sauerkraut, fresh Monterey Bay red snapper and a "hunter's schnitzel" of veal with some very interesting vegetables.

Each dish is presented in a copper pan, barely moments from stovetop or oven, and the food is fresh and hot.

Our serving of smoked pork slices was generous and the ruddy-red pork was tender and tasty. Homemade sauerkraut — a far cry from the canned variety — was accompanied by whipped potatoes.

A dining companion ordered the snapper, which was served with home-fried potatoes, fresh carrots, and green beans. Garnishes of parsley, pimiento, lemon slices and black olives made the plate especially attractive. An unusual sauce, seasoned with thyme, basil, oregano and bay leaf, turned the simple fish into a most interesting dish.

We also sampled the Jagerschnitzel, made of a tender boneless veal cutlet topped with oranges, stuffed green and black olives and the traditional "jager" accompaniments of lots of fresh mushrooms and tomatoes; the dish is the German counterpart of the French Veal Chasseur.

Dessert fans will find the Schwarzwälder Kirschtorte, many thin layers high, the Apfelstrudel and the Kaiserschmarren eminently satisfying, as is the rich, spiced coffee.

The Alpine Inn also serves delightful lunches, both indoors and on the patio. It is open daily except Wednesday and reservations are strongly advised.

Halloween says 'boo' with a traditional event and a new one

By RICHARD TYLER
Director, Sunset Community and Cultural Center

THERE HAS BEEN much planning for future events at Sunset Center so this week will be one of announcements. Halloween will be celebrated with two activities — one, a traditional event, the other something new.

Old Carmel will sponsor the annual Pumpkin-Carving Competition Sunday in the center parking lot at Sunset Center. The hours are from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Prizes will be awarded in four age divisions. The divisions are preschool, kindergarten through fifth grade, sixth through 12th grades and even a special category for adults. Refreshments will be served. Bring your own pumpkin and utensils.

The second activity is new. Sunset Center will cosponsor with Mrs. Pussycat's Porch an afternoon of Halloween festivities. The Magic Pearl Puppet and Mime Troupe will perform, awards for the best children's costumes will be given, and an award and reading of the best Halloween story in Mrs. Pussycat's Halloween storywriting contest will be offered. Admission is $1.25. Advance tickets can be purchased at Mrs. Pussycat's Porch in the Barnyard, the Sunset Center director's office, Carmel Music Store and Abinante's Music Store in Monterey. Children are encouraged to join in this event by wearing costumes for which toys and gift certificates will be given. It should prove to be an entertaining afternoon. In case of rain, we shall move to Sunset Theater.

WHEN I ARRIVED here last year shortly before Christmas, I was surprised to find that there was not much activity planned at the center for the Christmas holidays. I thought that since Sunset was the cultural and community center of Carmel, it should be a meeting point for all peoples of Carmel. Christmas in Carmel will start at Sunset Center Saturday, Dec. 3, when the combined choral groups of all the churches will join in song onstage in the Sunset Theater starting at 3 p.m. We have also been receiving excellent response from the business community, fraternal clubs, organizations, ethnic and other groups as well as the local residents. On that day, we shall have Santa Claus start the season's merriment, also a social hour hopefully with sweets of many lands. Pictures by the schoolchildren of the area will depict Christmas in Carmel. If you would like to help, please call our office, 624-3996.

DURING DECEMBER, we shall have five performances of the New York City Ballet's filmed production of The Nutcracker, starring Edward Villella, Melissa Hayden and Patricia McBride. Performing in the Carmel Festival of Dance, Frank Ohman will bring his company, the New York Dance Theater, to Sunset Theater on Saturday, Dec. 19. While many tickets have already been sold by subscription, there are some seats available by calling the director's office.

The Carmelo Elementary School will have its annual Christmas program, and a puppet show is being planned. We will also have our usual monthly films, the Brown Bag cinema with Christmas cookies at our lunch, and the special Marilyn Monroe filmed version of the Inge play Bus Stop.

NOW BACK TO this week: Explorama opens its film series tonight with a visit to Greece. The music and dance as well as the traditions of Greece will be shown. The film will be repeated on Friday at 8:15 p.m. On Saturday, the Chamber Music Society will present the Bulgarian Quartet. There are tickets available at the box office that night for balcony seats only. The Bulgarian Quartet has been an unchanged ensemble for 20 years and has gained international status for chamber music of the highest level. The group has won numerous awards and honors. At Sunset Theater, it will play a program including works by Schubert, Shostakovich and Schumann. Coming up next weekend, Friday and Saturday, Nov. 4 and 5, the Barbershoppers of the Monterey Peninsula will present their annual show at the Sunset Theater, called a Barbershop Harmony Spectacular. They will present such champion quartets as The Aliens, The Montagne Sisters and the Fat City Four. Tickets are available at Julia Marlowe Ticket Agency at Sunset Center as well as Lily Walker's in Pacific Grove and Abinante Music Store in Monterey.

THE MARJORIE EVANS GALLERY is a riot of color. The transparent oils of Denna Pro will be on exhibit through Nov. 20. This is a special show and should not be missed. Mrs. Pro has exhibited her works in many one-woman shows and is represented in private collections across the United States and abroad. The gallery is open weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

OPENING NEXT TUESDAY in the theater foyer will be the works from the Hamilton Brown Studio at Sunset Center. This exhibit will be open for all performances and can be seen at any other time by calling or stopping in at the director's office for admittance to the theater.

THE SEVENTH ANNUAL Homecrafter's Marketplace is scheduled Saturday, Nov. 19, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. If you have any crafts or artwork you have created and do not have a commercial outlet, please come in and register for a space. There is a $3 registration fee and you must be a resident of Carmel.

THERE IS A Jazz Festival in West Berlin if you have the time to go.

Coppelia at Sunset was a delightful romp

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

THE OAKLAND BALLET graced the Sunset Theater stage Wednesday, Oct. 19, opening the Fifth Carmel Festival of Dance in fine style. Other than missing the illusion of flight possible on a big stage, the performances of Billy the Kid and Coppelia were mostly very satisfying.

Billy the Kid is as much an American classic as Coppelia is a French one. Eugene Loring's choreography is still probably the most popular with dance companies that stage the work. But, as with Copland's music, why tamper with a classic? With this coupling of such popular works the thrust was, like the accomplishment, fine dancing by a well-disciplined company of mostly younger people. It was a program that had no surprises, which may be appropriate to these shores.

Billy the Kid is a potent character study, or can be. The principals, Billy, Garret and Alias, were well portrayed by Lance James, Ron Thiele and Michael Lowe. The overall performance was tight (it had to be on that small stage) and concentrated. The ensembles looked smart and well organized. But I was disappointed that the drama and portrayals were not more intense. The dancing was all there, but the characters rarely emerged into the vivid relief suggested by story and music.

Coppelia does not begin to deal with complex characters and to this extent was a more successful performance. In fact, it was a delightful romp. Sally Streets led the way with a marvelous Swanhilda. Her strengths, in particular, gave the performance a fine focus. She was well complemented by Noland T'sani as Franz, her partner, and by the ensemble scenes which were wonderful.

The story is developed through two and a half acts and then defers, in classic French form, to an extended sequence of solos, pas de deux and ensembles. It's kind of like dessert. And it was delicious.

Coppelia is a marvelously integrated ballet. The music fits the story and the dance style like a glove and the work achieves an unforgettable timeless quality. It also seems to fit dancers with a great naturalness and grace. But, after all, these are the ingredients of a classic.

LAST SATURDAY, a delightful program was presented at Monterey Peninsula College by Carl Dolmetch and Joseph Saxby. It was a divertissement of recorder and harpsichord music and was the third such visit to the Peninsula by these charming and popular musicians. To the delight and amusement of the Music Hall audience, Dolmetch illuminated the program with witty and informative comments about the music and the instruments.

The program consisted of mostly 16th-through 18th-century pieces: some serious sonatas, some ingenious and folk-like ditties. There were works that ranged from one for bass recorder with harpsichord, all the way through tenor, alto, soprano and sopranino recorders, up to a miniprino recorder that was six inches long, weighed about three-quarters of an ounce, and whose lowest note was C above high C. About this, Dolmetch complained that it was almost too small for his fingers. He then played the 16th-century The Hunt is Up. If the "hunt" were for the right notes, the bird was bedded.

There were also works for treble viol and harpsichord, and pieces for harpsichord alone. And there were three 20th-century pieces: White Throated Warbler, by the Australian Nigel Butterley; Prelude and Scherzo (based on the initials of three generations of Dolmetches), by Anthony Bernard; and Rumba and Tarantella, by Gordon Jacob. These latter three were all composed for Dolmetch. I wish there were space to share some of the fascinating stories that accompanied these pieces.

Dolmetch and Saxby rewarded the warmly appreciative audience with a couple of encores.

AT A RECEPTION after the concert, an even richer glimpse into these two gentlemen was at hand. Dolmetch is the understated and cerebral partner, the leader, who is the musicologist and who is acutely aware of the importance of the Dolmetch name in carrying on an invaluable tradition of service to great music. He is also a most gracious and warm person. Saxby is the gregarious natural musician who shines as brightly at a party as Dolmetch does in a concert. Saxby is an open and impulsive personality of deep feelings and faith. He is abundantly friendly with little of the reserve of Dolmetch. These two musicians complement each other beautifully and their differences of temperament ultimately serve to illuminate their activities and each other.

When Saxby told me they had been working together for 40 years, I asked if they ever disagreed. "Oh yes," he said, "and I have to apologize quite often." I asked, "Does he ever apologize?" Saxby looked worried for a moment, then with a whimsical smile said, "No."

THE WINDMILLS OF MYKONOS and the Aegean Sea are among the scenes in a new travel-adventure film entitled "Greece: Faces and Places," to be shown as the first in the 1977/78 Explorama series at Sunset Center, San Carlos and Ninth, Carmel, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 27-28.

Resigning superintendent will take $16,000 pay cut

By JIM BARRETT

WHY NOT? replied Harris Taylor, outgoing superintendent of Carmel Unified School District.

"People are always asking me why I want to resign as superintendent. I just have to answer: 'Why not?'"

"They say they just can't understand why I want to leave such a good position, especially since there have been no real controversies in the district over the years," he said.

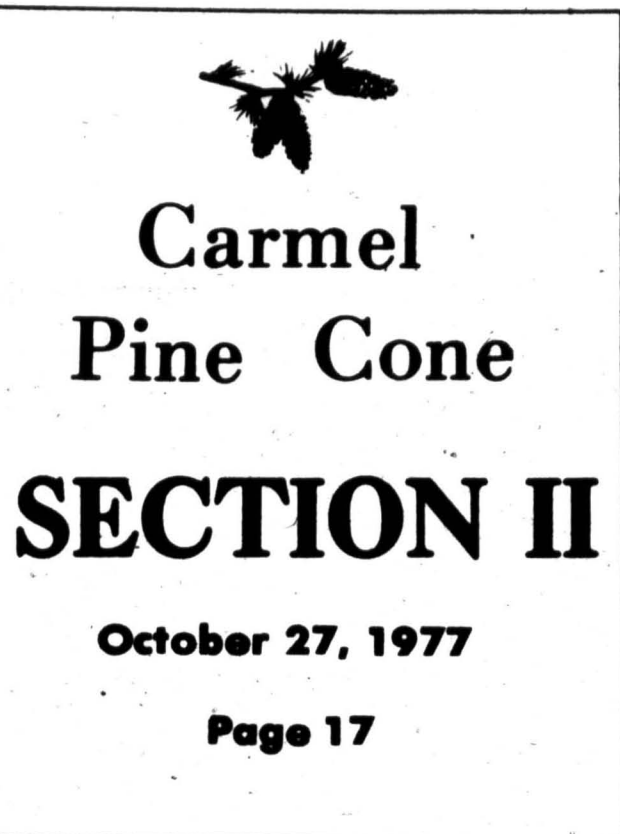

Taylor, 56, announced his resignation before the start of the current school term. It becomes effective in July.

What Taylor plans to do is seek a teaching post at Carmel High School. He said so in a recent interview.

His announced intent is to teach history, absorb the pay cut of at least $16,000 and teach for three years.

There are perhaps several reasons Taylor decided to step down, not the least of which was his desire to teach. Enthusiastic about that prospect, he said earnestly, "I really can't wait to get back into that classroom."

Taylor stands to benefit in his retirement from the move. Like virtually every educator in the state public school system, Taylor is enrolled in a pension plan generous to those with long terms of service.

Taylor's yearly pension would increase roughly 40 per cent if he remains a district employee until he is 60. If he quit next July, Taylor's yearly benefit would be slightly more than $12,150, but by adding three years of service he becomes eligible for an annual benefit close to $17,200.

THE PENSION figures were computed using the standard formula employed by the State Teachers Retirement System. The plan collects contributions from the educators and districts and runs the system.

In Taylor's case, the system is highly rewarding. Benefits are determined based on an employee's highest earnings from any consecutive three years. Taylor, hired as superintendent in 1967, earns $39,648 a year. In the past three years, his salary has been no lower than $37,823.

The average from the three consecutive years is computed with consideration for the number of years of service and an "age factor" fraction. The age factor increases slightly each year until an employee reaches 60. It remains unchanged, however, until he reaches 63.

IN THE INTERVIEW, Taylor said he will retire at 60. Asked if a teaching job will be open in September, Taylor replied, "I'm sure there will be because some people will be going on leave and we already have one resignation."

Taylor has tenure and is guaranteed a job. Teachers gain tenure after three years of employment. They can only be fired for specific cause.

One of Taylor's supporters, Trustee

HARRIS TAYLOR, resigning as the superintendent of Carmel schools, said he plans to teach until he retires at 60. He is 56.

Richard T. Wilsdon, said the superintendent can teach next year without bumping any other instructor.

Wilsdon said Taylor had two alternatives if he wanted to stay in the Carmel district. One involved obtaining a new contract from the trustees; the other was to ask for the teaching post.

"There is no question we would have renewed it," Wilsdon said of the superintendent's contract. "But I believe Harris just wanted to leave on a high note."

Pamela Smith, the school board president, said Taylor started his career as a history teacher and has led classes on occasion at the high school.

"He is a man of great intellectual depth and breadth. He certainly is qualified to teach history," Mrs. Smith said.

Another school trustee, Frances R. Gaver, said it was "logical" that Taylor would return to the classroom "where his talents could best be used."

Debate on future use

Town meeting called on Flanders mansion issue

A TOWN MEETING to discuss the proposed long-term uses of the Flanders Mansion and the Doolittle property at the south end of the city has been scheduled for Wednesday, Nov. 16, at the All Saints' Parish Hall, Dolores and Ninth.

The 8 p.m. meeting has been organized by the Carmel Citizens Committee. It is open to the public.

Ernest F. Easterbrook, president of the organization, will conduct the open meeting. City Administrator Jack Collins is scheduled to speak about his proposal for use of the property.

At last week's Planning Commission meeting, Collins suggested R-1 zoning for the estate, until the City Council determines a proper municipal use for the mansion.

The City Council will consider recommendations from the Planning Commission violation, Collins said, for making a residential use out of a park facility. Dow's lease expires in August.

Fearing some future commission or council might sell the estate, Commissioner Leslie Gross said all the property should be rezoned P-1 "to protect it in all possible ways."

Gross thought such zoning would preclude the possibility of ever selling the mansion.

"I don't think there's much of a chance the city will ever sell that property," Collins answered, "but the city could still sell it no matter how you zone it."

It isn't the business of the Planning Commission to legislate the proper use of the estate, Collins said. That should be left to the City Council, he added.

COMMISSIONER Robert Stephenson, chairman of the meeting in the absence of Dorothea Roberts, agreed. "How can we write a new use for the mansion if we don't even know what it's going to be?" he asked.

William Doolittle, nephew of Robert A. Doolittle, original owner of the property, expressed surprise that the commission took six years to finally discuss a proper zoning for the property.

Former mayor Eugene Hammond said he hopes the property will be left in "as nearly a natural state as possible."

A petition with 50 signatures from residents supporting a "natural state" for the property was presented to the commission by a Carmel resident, Mrs. Janice Hinton.

Gross continued to argue for P-1 zoning of all the property, including the estate. He cited a letter from the Forestry Commission noting any increase of traffic "would not be in the best intent of the mansion's use."

"I'm prepared to vote for P-1 zoning to preserve the mansion in city hands," Gross said.

City Attorney George Brehmer reminded Gross, "You don't want to shackle the City Council by putting the mansion in P-1 now, then forcing the council to back up later."

Brehmer added, "You're not here to thwart the council."

The commission voted to recommend P-1 zoning for the property and R-1 zoning for the mansion.

New Red Cross chief

MRS. JAMES BURGESS, of Carmel, has been named chairwoman for the Carmel chapter of the American National Red Cross. The selection was made by the chapter board of directors. Mrs. Burgess has served on the board and was the chairwoman of the 1976-77 fund drive. A native of Seattle, Wash., she also has served on the Red Cross board at the Fort Ord Hospital. Clara, the chapter doll, is pictured with Mrs. Burgess.

Petition asks that it be saved for a reserve to rezone most of the Flanders-Doolittle property at its meeting on Monday, Nov. 7.

Following the Planning Commission hearing last week, the commission recommended most of the 33 acres be rezoned from R-1 (residential use) to P-1 (park use).

But at the suggestion of Collins and City Planning Director Bob Griggs, the commission recommended the mansion itself remain zoned R-1, until the City Council determines its proper municipal use.

REZONING THE BUILDING P-1 would practically freeze any use of the mansion. "It would be absurd to zone it in such a way that it can't even be a building," Collins said.

Furthermore, if the mansion were rezoned P-1, Bradford Dow, leasing the mansion from the city, would be in

PARTY PLANS

By PHYLLIS JERVEY

While those under seven are making cutouts of black cats in the next room, why don't you adults have a Halloween buffet and dance to some records. Make up several casseroles in advance, one more spicy for grown-up appetites, the other cooking with wine. Something a knowing Frenchman once told me was to cook only with the wine you would serve at dinner.

Now that it is autumn, we should start off with a hearty soup called Lazy Bean Soup:

Old-fashioned but made in a new way. Sauté 1 medium-sized minced onion in 2 tbsps. butter for five minutes. Add 2 (10 1/2 oz.) cans condensed bean with bacon soup, 1 (10 1/2 oz.) can consomme, 1 cup water, 1/2 cup dry table wine. Bring to a gentle boil for about 15 minutes. Stir frequently. Season to taste with Worcestershire, salt and pepper. Serve piping hot in mugs. Crumbled crisp bacon makes a good garnish. This plan is from my endorsed copy of The Pleasures of Cooking with Wine by Emily Chase. This is for the children who go trick or treating.

Quick and Easy Borsch: Drain 1-pound can diced beets, reserving liquid. Chop beets very finely. Sauté some minced spring onion in a little butter until tender, but not brown. Add beet liquid and simmer uncovered for five minutes. Fresh lemon juice adds a certain sparkle. The crowning glory is a generous spoonful of sour cream plus a sprinkling of chopped dill pickle. Wonder what the Russians would think of this?

Now for an alternate that makes an excellent beginner. Nice to serve in the living room with cheese straws or warmed crackers as a prelude to a company meal. Use canned consomme diluted with dry sherry and a tiny bit of lemon juice. Have a just ripe avocado on hand. Peel and slice it in largish chunks. Salt and pepper them lightly. Put some of the avocado in each two-handled bouillon cup, pour in hot broth and present at once. Serve six.

Next comes the adult casserole, Shrimp in Rice Ring: Arrange one package frozen artichoke hearts in buttered baking dish, putting peeled and deveined large shrimp on top. Sauté some fresh sliced mushrooms distributing over top of shrimp. Add cream sauce made by diluting cream of mushroom soup with wine. Sprinkle with grated Parmesan cheese and put in a 350°F. oven until hot all the way through. To me, nothing is more degrading food-wise than something lukewarm.

My brother, who lived for many years in Carmel, brought boxes of gorgeous grapes from his Walnut Creek rancho. The huge purplish ones and light green seedless ones are so delicious and thirst-quenching. We have festooned the house with this timely fruit.

To return to the Shrimp in Rice Ring briefly, a buttered ring of cooked flaky white mixed with chopped fresh parsley should be available to be filled with the delightful shrimp melange. Apples, unpeeled and cut in eighths, are a slimming and fine finale.

By E. G. BALAN

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA, is about as far away from Carmel as you can get geographically. That is where Maggi Weston began her career in show business, which eventually led her here to Camelot-by-the-Sea.

She now owns and operates the Weston Gallery of photography on Sixth Avenue, where one can find fine photographic prints by Ansel Adams, Edward Weston, Wynn Bullock and a host of others.

Born in London, she grew up in South Africa. Singing was her ambition, and when she entered and won a national talent contest, a career was born, a career which led her back to London, then throughout Europe, and finally to the United States.

After appearances on the Ed Sullivan Show and in the Persian Room of the Plaza Hotel in New York, Maggi came west to Hollywood. She visited Carmel for a weekend. "I loved it. I decided this is where I wanted to live."

Maggi joined the Carmel community and performed in local theater, where she met director Cole Weston. They were married a year later.

The San Francisco Chronicle wrote of her Forest Theater performance of Oliver: "The only player who let out all the stops and really tore into her part was Maggi Woodward as Nancy. She is lovely, bawdy and bitter in all the right degrees . . . she steals the show. The other principals shouldn't let her get away with it."

After eleven years of marriage, Cole and Maggi were divorced, " . . . but we are still good friends," she insists. She later opened her unusual gallery and it has become a thriving business, international in scope. But her entertainment career didn't end.

She had given up her touring for her family, and then for her gallery, but now to her delight, finds that she is asked to perform whenever she goes to London. About four times a year, she visits museums, art collectors and dealers in Europe. In fact, she is there now, performing at Venezia, a posh club in the Soho district of London.

She lives in a Spanish-style rancho at the end of Val Verde at the entrance to Carmel Valley.

Q: How did you start your singing career?

M: They had a talent contest in South Africa, a national talent contest in the theaters. There was no television at that time. I think there still is not. I won the contest. The prize was money, but the really important part of it was that I was given two weeks with a professional band at one of the large hotels in Johannesburg. And that was the beginning. I just never looked back.

Q: They asked you to stay on?

M: Yes. There used to be lines of people waiting. It was a lounge . . . women were not allowed into bars in South Africa . . . they used to have these very, very beautiful lounges, something like Vegas. The band put on kind of a show. It was like a cabaret. I was very successful at that, and then went on to do radio and theater.

I got into my first musical over there and loved that. Then a big band from London came to South Africa and played at the Coliseum. Their singer became ill, and they wanted somebody to fill in. My name was suggested. It was so successful that they signed me to a contract in London.

However, when I got to London the bandleader became very ill, and the band disbanded, so I arrived in London with nothing. But within three months I had an agent; he contracted someone to get an act together for me, and I was sent to Germany to perform and then return.

I did television, spectaculars, and played the West End of London: Churchill's, which is not a great club any longer, but it used to be a very good club in the West End, and the Continental.

I wasn't doing any straight acting at that point . . . then the head of the William-Morris agency saw me in London and decided that I should come to America. They actually paid for me to come to this country. I appeared in New York on the Ed Sullivan Show, and I also played six weeks in the Persian Room at the Plaza Hotel in New York.

My career really started to blossom at that point. I also came west to do the Ernie Ford show on television, and then I played Cero's and Mocambo's in Los Angeles, and played Vegas . . . played all over the country. In the meantime I also went back and forth to London for certain engagements.

Q: With that fast-paced life, how did you ever come to Carmel? We don't have any clubs or lounges.

M: I came to Carmel for a weekend, and loved it. I decided this is where I wanted to live. I didn't want to live in Hollywood. I hated it there, and wanted to get out, so I decided to come here. I did.

At that time the State Theater in Monterey was a live theater . . . professionals came up from Hollywood in the summer to do musicals.

My first appearance there was in Steinbeck's Pipe Dream. I played Flora. That was my first professional appearance here. I met Cole Weston then, and we were married a year later.

Q: Was your family in South Africa upset when you left for London?

M: No, actually my father died when I was quite young. My mother had come to South Africa after I did. I came with an aunt, and she joined us quite a bit later. She was in London during the war years, so I didn't see a lot of her. She understood how ambitious I was at the time. I also have a brother in London who is an opera singer. His name is Edward Woodward. He sings in London quite a bit of the time. So it's in the family somewhat.

Cole and I worked together for a little while, but Cole didn't really like my traveling . . . at that point I had done so much that I really was ready to not do it for awhile. I knew that Cole and I could work together here, though it wasn't at any great level, but that was much more attractive to me than traveling around without him.

Also I wanted to have a child very badly, which we did. We had Matthew eighteen months after we were married. He's my pride and joy. He has been worth everything that I ever gave up. So I didn't do a lot of things here. I did odd things. At odd times I would get a call from London, and I would go.

Cole bought a yacht, a 50-foot sailboat, and the family took a trip around the world. Well, I didn't make it all the way. I went as far as the Bahamas with them. I was still rehearsing for a new show, because I thought if we went to England I would have to be ready to work if I was there. I knew it would be very easy for me to work again if I was in England. So I took Matthew and Kara, my stepdaughter, to New York. I went to England, and actually I performed there for around six months.

Cole was supposed to join me in England, but navigation is sometimes complicated . . . you know how sailing boats are. They didn't get to a point when they were supposed to in time for the weather, so he couldn't leave. I decided to return and I took Matthew and Kara back here to Carmel. Since then I've done a few odd things, but nothing that I would say is professional. And then Cole and I were divorced.

Then I had the problem of thinking, "Shall I go back into singing or what shall I do?" Well, at that point I really felt that Matthew needed something steady, because Cole was gone off again on the boat. He was gone and Matthew was naturally upset at the divorce, and I felt that if I also took off and left him with friends or something that it wouldn't be any good. So I

Backgammon by Omar Sharif

Black rolls 1-1. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

There is no problem about how to play three of the 1's. You enter with the man on the bar, then hit the two White blots with another two. That leaves just one 1 to play.

There is some argument that can be made to play a man to the White 2-point. That will allow you to escape from the White home board with both 5's and 6's. That move is certainly safe.

However, this is not the time to worry about minor considerations like that. You have two White men on the bar, and your concern should be to increase your chances of making at least one more point in your home board. If you can succeed in keeping the White men out for a while, or perhaps even in closing your home board, you could win a gammon.

You could increase your builders by advancing the man that is now on your 11-point to the 10-point. That would permit you to make your 4-point should your roll 6-4 or 6-3 at your next turn. That is already an improvement over the first possibility.

However, the move that gives you the maximum chance to improve your home board and perhaps gammon your opponent is to bring a man from your bar-point to your 6-point. Don't worry about the blot you create on the bar-point. With two White men on the bar, you cannot be hit. And at your next turn you will have a good chance either to point on the man your opponent gets in or to remake your bar-point.

This move is not without some risk — for example, 5-5 would be an awkward number for you to play — but its aggressive advantages more than compensate.

Remember When?

50 years ago

From the Pine Cone, Oct. 28, 1927:

WITCHES IN SHROUDS WILL FLOAT THROUGH THE AIR

This week, many articles have disappeared from Carmel houses — and such queer things have been taken! "Another burglar!" people exclaim. "We must lock our doors." The chief of police is notified, but he can find no clue. "It is very mysterious," he says with a sigh, and Carmel youngsters look at each other with twinkling eyes. They run off later, by themselves, and go into spasms of laughter.

What does it all mean?

It all means — but please don't tell a soul — that Halloween is coming next Monday and grown-ups are not supposed to investigate too closely into missing things.

THE FIRST OF THE RAINS

How many people in Carmel, during the night of Tuesday last, awoke to hear the sound of rain on their shingles, smiled sleepily and slumbered more happily because of that patter. So, too, the dry brown earth welcomed the coming of the fall rains that washed away the accumulated dust from the foliage of oak and pine and brightened each shrub and plant.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT...

"Every street corner should have designating signs," says Frank Woolsey. He will probably write Mr. Cheney about it, for he got lost up in old Carmel the other afternoon and spent hours trying to find what he had started after and the rest of the day trying to locate himself.

5,000 FOR CARMEL IN 1999!

What size Carmel when it attains full growth? Before planning begins, the question of ultimate population must be settled. Not definitely, which is impossible; but approximately for the territory that is included within the present city limits.

Except for a few backward "booster clubs," nobody howls for an increased number of residents in the city. Slogans such as "1,000,000 in 1930" are passe. Cities have learned that it is quality, not quantity, that counts in population. And especially is Carmel desirous of keeping free from any hint of crowding.

25 years ago

From the Pine Cone, Oct. 31, 1952:

FRIENDLY GIVING

Marian Todd, executive secretary of the Monterey Peninsula Community Chest, released the following letter which, she says, typifies the courteous, generous spirit of the people of Carmel in their response to the annual fund drive.

"We have several times missed the Community Chest collector for our district," the writer says, "so I am enclosing our check. Please credit this to Mrs. James Dempsey who made such patient effort to reach us."

BABY STRASBURGER

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Strasburger welcomed little girl Lee at the Peninsula Community Hospital last week. The baby is a descendant of a famous revolutionary in English history, John Watkins, who eventually came to the United States in search of freedom about 200 years ago.

BUSINESS ASSOCIATION FAVORS PARKING PLAN

"The next move will be to meet with the City Council and work out details of setting up a parking district," Arne Halle, president of the Carmel Business Association, said after the board heard a report on the business district opinion survey.

The poll indicates enough favorable sentiment for the parking district plan to warrant that the business association and the city initiate the project. First objective should be the purchase of the Murphy lot for a district-owned parking area, Halle pointed out.

From the Pine Cone, Nov. 2, 1967:

GOOD CARMEL GOBLINS THIS HALLOWEEN

The goblins of Carmel were relatively quiet this Halloween compared to the past when they dumped pumpkins by the dozens at the top of Carmel Hill to watch them splatter and tumble down the road. Only a few pumpkins were found along the road in this area.

This is not to say that all was calm. There were spotted cases of overripe avocados being smeared on cars, tomatoes thrown against garage doors, eggs heaved at automobiles and shaving cream lather on the streets and cars.

JOAN BAEZ RELEASED FROM PRISON

Carmel Valley resident Joan Baez, her mother and her younger sister were released from Santa Rita jail yesterday after serving 10 days for their part in antidraft demonstrations in Oakland.

"Isn't it insane," she said, "that the same jail that holds murderers is used for arresting people who refuse to murder?"

SONIC BOOMS TO END

Congressman Burt Talcott assures us that sonic booms over the area have been brought to a halt. The reason: The Air Force has completed their program of test and evaluation of the SR-71 program.

RAIN GUTTER

"FACTORY ON WHEELS"

Pictured here is our remarkable new machine making continuous rain gutters on a job in Pebble Beach. It's the only machine of its kind on the entire Monterey Peninsula.

This amazing equipment can roll out seamless strips of gutter any length up to 980 feet! No seams mean better appearance, better draining, easier cleaning, no joint leakage.

What's more, the material is long-lasting aluminum which will not rust, with a fine protective coating of bonderized paint (like an enamel, applied under high pressure) both inside and out.

Expensive? Not at all! The cost for this extraordinary rain gutter is comparable to ordinary types of galvanized metal gutters which rust out in very few years.

So give us a call. Our skilled craftsmen will quickly and expertly produce and install this great new gutter right on the job for you. Remember... it's aluminum and will not rust.

CHINESE FOOD has captured the German cooking. Leafing through a cook-tastebuds of Annette Norden (center), an book with Annette are Pam and Janet exchange student from Hamburg, but she Clemens, daughters of Annette's hosts in still likes to tutor her schoolmates in Carmel. (Del Kaller photo)

In the Gordon Clemens family

German visitor, 16, spending a year in Carmel

By DELORES KALLER

"Do you want to go to America?" Annette Norden said yes to her father's question and she was on her way from Hamburg, Germany, to Carmel.

Annette's father, principal at a school in Hamburg, suggested the idea to his eldest daughter. She applied and was accepted by American Field Service, a student exchange program.

The Gordon Clemens family, owners of the Torres Inn of Carmel, expressed a desire to become a host family, and it was their home that Annette came to in August. Annette, 16, has a sister, Agnes, 14. She said she felt at home immediately with the Clemens family, who also have two teenaged daughters, Pam and Janet. All the girls attend Carmel High School.

Annette, a senior, finds things here a bit different than in Hamburg. The actual time spent in class here is longer. Annette's school was dismissed at 1:30 p.m. to allow families to have their hot meal at midday, a German custom. She also noted that more students here have after school jobs than her friends in Germany.

Chinese food is one of Annette's U.S. discoveries. Cooking is one of her hobbies, and she also is a gymnast. Annette takes piano lessons and is picking up guitar playing, too.

There is no language barrier for Annette or the Clemens family because English is taught in Germany starting in the fifth grade. She has taken six years of English and four years of French.

Annette says, "I feel very good about myself." Her smiling, relaxed manner is proof of that statement. She is a friendly, self-assured young lady who is enjoying her adventure away from home, perhaps as much as the Clemenses enjoy having her with them in Carmel.

Oarsmen row from Santa Cruz

Hearty oarsmen from the Carmel area rowed the 26 miles from Santa Cruz to Yankee Point over the weekend in a casual cruise organized by Ted and Fran Ciesla of Carmel Highlands.

A total of six rowboats of varied size joined in the six-hour journey. Ciesla was teamed with Bill Foster, from Monterey. They rowed a 16-foot dory.

Dave Morse and Leland Lewis, both of Carmel, joined 77-year-old Joe Weise, of San Francisco, rowing a 20-foot Whitehull.

After the oarsmen beached at the point, Fran and the shore party started the steaks sizzling.

Exiled Uganda bishop visits

He fled Amin's terror, but his ministry continues

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

MULTIPLY THE population of Carmel by 100, then eliminate it.

That gives some idea of the number of persons Uganda President Idi Amin reportedly has murdered since taking power in 1971.

Despite the atrocities, many where Christians were the victims, Anglican Bishop Festo Kivengere of Uganda said in Carmel that he loves Amin. He spoke over the weekend at All Saints' Episcopal Church.

Kivengere fled Uganda in February and has been in California on a speaking tour.

In 1973, Kivengere had a chilling experience with the dictator. The bishop personally tried to dissuade Amin from putting 12 untried Ugandans before a firing squad.

"He listened to me," Kivengere said. "He listened to me attentively. He even thanked me and promised to take it up with his Defense Council."

The following day, the men were executed.

The bishop bowed his head and whispered, "Three of those men belonged to my congregation."

The bishop said his Christian faith prohibits him from hating others, even Amin.

What if he returned to Uganda? "I'd be eliminated like the others," Kivengere replied matter-of-factly.

AFTER NUMEROUS warnings from friends, the bishop fled Uganda. His criticism of the Amin regime endangered his life.

"Anyone who speaks out under Amin will be eliminated sooner or later," he said.

The 56-year-old bishop prefers not to discuss his escape. Kivengere fears it could inhibit others from doing the same, although he concedes Amin probably knows the route he took.

His wife fled with him at night, and they were forced to leave some children behind, he said. He did not say how many were left.

Exile in the United States will not stop his ministry, he said. "I'll continue the work I've done for the past 25 years — the preaching of my ministry," he vowed.

WHY WAS Kivengere spared execution? "I don't know," he said. All Kivengere could say is if he had stayed, he would have been killed.

"To live in a country where you have no other protection but heaven is beautiful, precarious and challenging," he said. Those in his congregation knew any service could have been their last, he explained.

Amin does not fear religion, said Kivengere, only its organization, which he views as a threat to his power.

DESPITE REPORTS of widespread executions, the "elimination" process is still selective, according to Kivengere. Anyone with leadership potential is murdered, he said.

"His agents have a free ticket to execute anyone they want," the bishop claimed.

Every time there is an attempt on Amin's life, hundreds and thousands of people are murdered in retaliation, the bishop said. There have been three assassination attempts this year.

"The murders are wrong. Amin knows it.

BISHOP FESTO Kivengere pleaded with Idi Amin to stop the killing. Amin promised the bishop he would consider it, then executed 12 Ugandans the following day. In fear, Kivengere fled Uganda. He spoke in Carmel on Saturday and Sunday.

He reacts strongly to any information that tells the true story of what is happening in Uganda," said the bishop.

"The situation in Uganda cannot change under the present regime," said Kivengere.

If Amin is deposed, the bishop said, "I'd catch the next plane to Uganda." So would thousands of other Ugandans, he said.

decided to open a business, an African shop
.... It was very fine art.

Q: Xanadu, it was called, wasn't it?

M: Yes, that's right. But it didn't work. I had it for a year, and it just wasn't right for here. I had some very fine pieces, you know, museum pieces. It was not a tacky tourist shop. It was really a fine shop but it didn't work. So I was faced with "What shall I do?" again. All my connections were in photography... people in the museums and so forth... so I opened the gallery. It's been fantastic. Business has grown until it's international now, and I have to travel to New York and to Europe to go to the museums and meet with a lot of very wealthy collectors and dealers. It's a very, very big business, and very exciting... meeting wonderful people. I guess in a way it's almost like being onstage. (Laughing) Everything is on a one-to-one basis. You have to go in and sparkle, and do all of this. And the wonderful thing is that because I have to go to Europe so often — three or four times a year — I find that I'm singing when I go there.

Q: You gave up your career, but it came

Maggi Weston

'People are becoming aware that photography is an art. Five years ago, you could buy an Ansel Adams for $200. Now they are $1,500.'

back. How did that happen?

M: It's come back in sort of a strange way. I appeared on television on a special variety program in England. And I also appeared in a couple of restaurants in Soho which cater mainly to directors and actors and people that have known me all along. It's fun. It isn't anything that I make a great deal of money at, but it doesn't matter... it's wonderful that I can go back occasionally and still be remembered.

Q: You are leaving for Europe in a few days. Are you going to perform this time?

M: Yes. There's a place called Venezia in Soho. It's a lovely place that caters mainly to theater people. They asked me if I would sing there. It isn't any long engagement. I can only do two or three nights at the most. Or if I come back I can do another couple of nights but it's wonderful, and it's just nice to be appreciated.

Q: But your upcoming trip to Europe is essentially a business trip for the gallery.

M: Yes, I'm going to London, to Paris and Switzerland, and to Italy... all of it is business... I just got back from New York. I was in New York for 10 days prior to this.

Q: What did you do there?

M: There are collectors there. Collectors and dealers and museums, you know. There's a lot of money in photography.

Q: How do you account for that phenomenon? Ten years ago a good photograph sold for $50 to $100. Then five years ago it was...

M: Even less than that, right?

Q: For some photos. But now they are up to $1,000... $1,400...

M: Well, it's just that the photographic market as an art market has just been very slow in coming about. Things are just happening now. People are becoming aware that photography is certainly an art. Five years ago you could buy an Ansel Adams for $200. Now they are $1,500. There's a tremendous difference. You could buy an Edward Weston five years ago for a couple of hundred dollars. Well, now they range from $1,000 to $7,000.

Now we're getting into archival color which will put it forward. Prices are moving up now.

Q: Could you explain "archival"?

M: Archival just means that we hope it will last a lifetime, a hundred years, shall we say. The black-and-white work does if it's properly washed and processed and so on, but the color... there's a certain amount of fading after so many years. But now innovative people are working in dye transfer and Cibachrome, which supposedly at this point is archival. This moves the color into a different category.

Q: Would you own a gallery anywhere but Carmel?

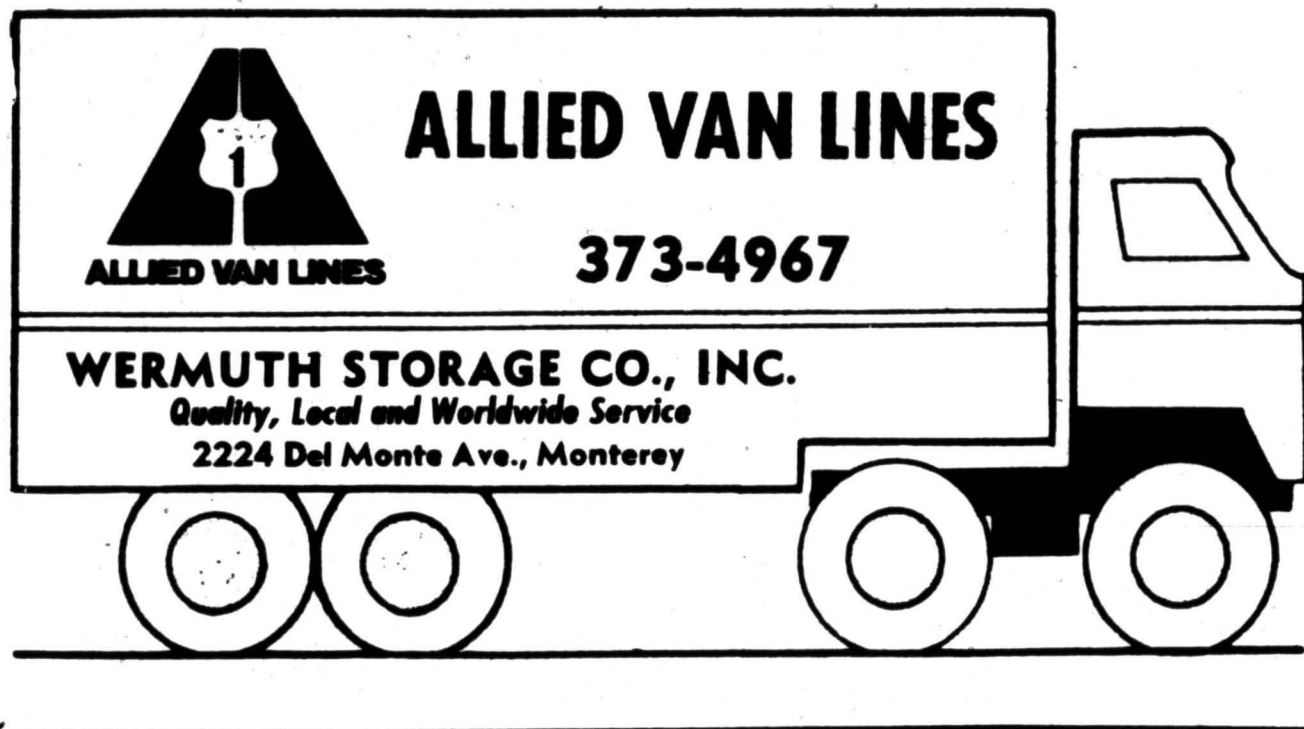

M: Oh, no, I wouldn't want to be anywhere else but Carmel. It's unique here. I think the gallery does well because people come here from all over the country. It's amazing... All the connections I have internationally started here. I met people, and through them I met others, but it started here.

Q: When you travel, do you hear people talking about Carmel as an art center?

M: Oh yes, I think Carmel is known for its galleries.

The fact that there is a photographic gallery is unique, but galleries per se are what Carmel is all about, isn't it?

PADRE SPORTS

By ELIZABETH M. DARE
Carmel High Sportswriter

PERHAPS ONE IS correct in saying that the Padres were slow in starting their 1977 season, but after last week's game, there doesn't seem to be a doubt in the world that Carmel's squad is now in high gear.

Behind the exciting play of Rick Brenneman and John Lucido, the Padres trounced the RLS Pirates 44-6 on the Carmel home field.

The half-time score, 30-0, was largely due to errors on the part of RLS. The Padres lost no time in taking advantage of the situation. Carmel recovered four fumbles and intercepted four passes.

The most exciting moment of the game was a deception play by the Padres which left RLS and fans alike open-jawed. Brenneman succeeded in faking an attempt at a field goal, while John Lucido simply picked up the ball and ran it in for the score.

Both Brenneman and Lucido finished the day with outstanding statistics. Brenneman passed for 215 yards, including two touchdown passes, kicked a 44-yard field goal and booted in five extra points. Lucido scored three of the six Padre touchdowns.

Looking at these statistics, one's reaction might be to chalk the victory up to the fine play of numbers 12 and 13. But the winning factor for the Padres was the abundance of teamwork and communication. The Padres are on the up-swing.

Saturday, Carmel faces Gonzalez in the Padre homecoming game.

THE CARMEL VARSITY VOLLEYBALL TALLIED THEIR SECOND MTAL victory, this one over King City last Thursday, extending their record to 2-0. Paced by T. D. Price and Jill Ricketts, the Padre girls succeeded in completing the match in two games.

The junior varsity squad, led by Fiona Mackenzie, Dana Hunter and Duffy Carolan, also were able to down King City in a short match.

Hot water at mountain parks

Hot water for showers is again available at campgrounds in three state parks in the Santa Cruz Mountains: Big Basin Redwoods and Henry Cowell Redwoods State Parks in Santa Cruz County and Portola State Park in San Mateo County. Showers have been unavailable all summer because of a critical water shortage in the area.

State Park Manager Herman Schlerf said the season's first rains and the end of the heavy use period have eased the water shortage. Hot water for showers is expected to be available in those parks at least until next spring, but another dry year could force closure of showers there again next summer.

About the only similarity in these two attractive houses is their price. One is for the family that prefers to live in close, near downtown shopping, the beach and the amenities of Carmel living. The other is for people who like lots of space and sky and sea, and the splendid freedom of country life.

Christmas Card House on Carmelo south of 10th

Remember those wonderfully homey cards we used to get ... with the charming white cottage, a wreath in each colonial window, smoke curling up from the chimney? This house reminds you of that -- without the frost and snow, but with all the charm. • It's a sort of meandering house, with surprises at each turn. The front wing is a cathedral-roofed living room with an open staircase rising along the far wall. That leads to the large upstairs bedroom and bath, with casement windows on three sides. Every room but one is lighted from three sides. • Three bedrooms in all, two baths, a large dining room, and a just-remodeled kitchen that's a delight. All this, plus various nooks and a two-room-and-bath guest house. A little over 2,000 square feet. Fourth house on the east side.

Seaside Aerie in Carmel Riviera

Just five miles south of Rio Road, one mile below Highlands Inn, is the spectacular house at 180 Mal Paso Drive. It's poised 350 feet above the sea and a quarter-mile inland, with an uninterrupted view of ships, whales and fishing boats. • Its core is the kitchen, set where the two 50-foot wings of the house meet. Like the cockpit of a 747, it faces the sea through broad picture windows. Just off it through glass doors is a protected deck, inviting in almost any weather. At the ends of each wing are private bedroom suites: master bedroom and bath on the east, guest accommodations on the north. • The north wing also contains the 26x19 living room with vast windows to the sea and, on a lower level, another large room and bath. Still another bedroom lies between the east suite and kitchen. • The one acre slopes toward the ocean from Mal Paso, has beautiful gardens, various outbuildings (one could be a guest house), and unlimited water.

Traditional Grace and Elegance

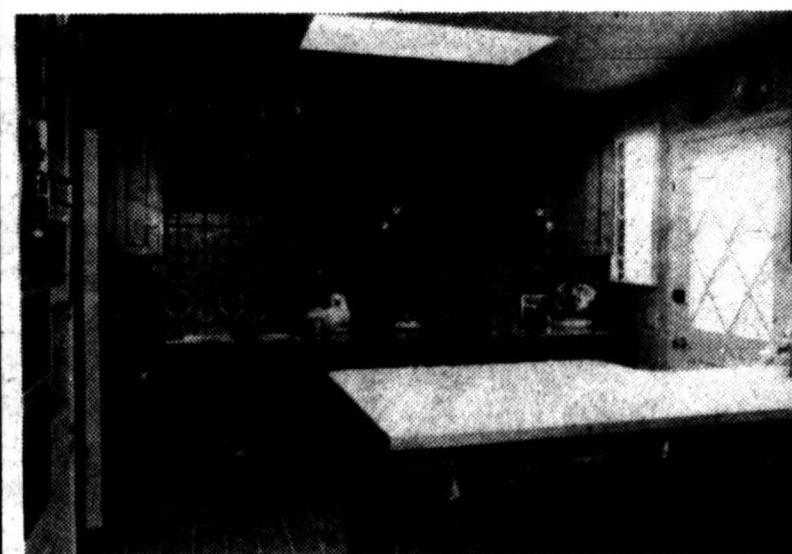

All the grace of traditional Monterey Colonial architecture is exemplified in this two-story home overlooking Carmel Mission, the Fish Ranch hills, and Point Lobos. The moment you step from the brick-paved front terrace into the tile-floored entry with graceful spiral staircase, you are captivated by its elegant ambience.

The living room, extending the width of the house, opens through doors with leaded, beveled glass panes to an enclosed brick courtyard with a metal-hooded barbecue. Among other delights of this handsome room are a bow window, another window of delicately etched glass, formal fireplace, wide board ceiling and gleaming plank floor.

Stained glass windows, artistic wallpaper treatment and crystal chandelier enrich the dining room off which is a tile-countered bar. Downstairs, too, are a bedroom and bath with outside entrance. The richly carpeted upstairs contains master bedroom, two bathrooms and, featuring custom wallpapers, another bedroom and a den (fourth bedroom).

This is one end of the kitchen, a joy for the most fastidious gourmet cook. Among its many amenities are microwave and two more ovens, built-in barbecue, breakfast bar, butcher block and ceramic tile counters, abundance of cabinets, a huge pantry and, above the sink, a miniature greenhouse for your spice, or other, plants. Price of this charming home, guarded by a security system, is $255,000.
